The Comte de Caylus (1692-1765) and His Milieu: The Respublica Literaria

With the second half of his Balzan Prize, Marc Fumaroli involved three young scholars in a long-term study of the life and works of Anne-Claude-Philippe de Pestels de Lévis de Thubières-Grimoard, comte de Caylus (1692-1765) and of his milieu. The funds were also used for an array of cultural initiatives which were instrumental to the realization of a more comprehensive plan, i.e., the foundation of an interdisciplinary research institute on the history of the Republic of Letters. The Institut européen d'histoire de la République des Lettres – Respublica Literaria was officially established in 2006, with support from the Ministère de l'Enseignement supérieur et de la Recherche as well as the Ministère de l'Éducation nationale, and is now based at the École normale supérieure de Paris. The administration of the Balzan funds was entrusted to the Institut de France.

Cordélia Hattori, Nicola Iodice and Xavier Dufestel worked on different aspects of comte de Caylus' life and work. He was a polyhedric intellectual, almost forgotten today despite his fundamental contributions, along with Scipione Maffei, Winckelmann and others, in developing the cult of antiquity in eighteenth century France and Europe. His seven volume Recueil d'antiquités égyptiennes, étrusques, grecques, et romaines (Paris, 1752-1767) was a chief source for the beginnings of the science of archaeology and the arts in the Neoclassical period. Cordélia Hattori (Musée de Lille) worked mainly on the official documents, which shed light on the finances of comte de Caylus, his genealogy and his many relationships, his influence on the Académie Royale de Peinture et de Sculpture and on the Académie des Inscriptions et Belles-Lettres included. Nicola Iodice focused on his correspondence and, in collaboration with Xavier Dufestel, determined the precise chronology of his life, his studies and his intellectual and personal relationships.
